

The Grey Wolf

Description

Each member of the pack has a thick coat and tail the thick coat varies in color from nearly white to almost black, the thick tail is held high when running.

Did you know...

Open me!!

The Grey Wolf's life style

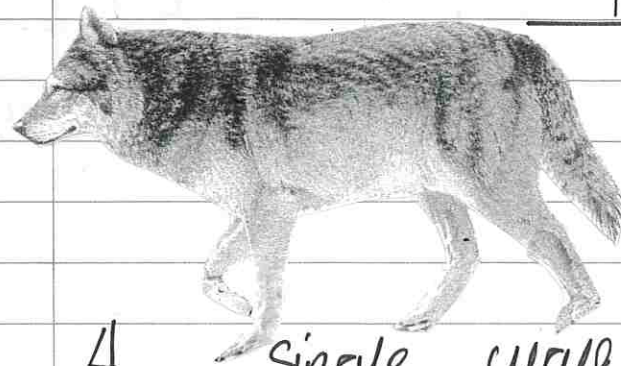

Interestingly the grey wolf becomes sexually mature at about two years of age, once a wolf has found a friend the pair usually stay together for life.

Immediately the mating season starts at the end of winter and often causes tension within the pack.

Features of the Grey wolf

The grey wolf is a medium sized mammal with sharp teeth so when she/he gets prey it grips inside the mouth with the incisors and scrapes the flesh off the bones.

Food & Hunting

The grey wolf is the big game hunter of the dog family hunting mostly hoofed animals.

A single wolf is capable of catching and killing a deer unaided, but when hunting with a pack, it preys on larger animals such as moose.

Did you know...!

Gradually the cubs learn to eat meat, which is brought to the den by one of the adults.

Habitat

These Mammals are found in mostly Canada, eastern Russia parts of the United States and Europe.