WALT publish a fable.

One hot afternoon the annoying hare was boasting about how fast he was.

And the wise tortoise was so fed up of the hare boasting.

"I'm the fastest animal in the forest if anyone races me I'll beat them!!" he would say arrogantly.

"Let's have a race around the beautiful lake," the tortoise said confidently.

The hare thought it was a joke and laughed wickedly, as well as the tortoise just smiled slowly.

"I'll meet you at the starting line," cried the hare.

The hare ran to the starting line as the tortoise was striding back. When they got to the starting line they chose the fox as the umpire.

Because foxes were fair and there they were also quite smart animals.

When they started the race the hare took off at a great speed.

But the tortoise just moved slowly but steadily.

"You can't catch me!" mocked the hare.
"I don't mind if I don't catch you Just get on with race," cried the tortoise.

"You never will!" laughed the hare,
as the tortoise ran slowly but steadily
the hare ran at top speed and got tired so decided to take a nap.
As the tortoise reached the sleeping
hare he said

"Ooh fancy that the hare has taken a nap," cried tortoise. As the tortoise had already crossed the arrogant hare. The animals cheered for the tortoise waking up hare. "Oh no the tortoise
is winning!" screamed the hare.
Sadly the hare was too late. The tortoise had won. The hare had apologised for his rude behaviour.

Moral of the story: don't judge
