

Dear Fa,

I miss you. I haven't learnt to survive yet. What do I do? Ever since I've been on my own, I feel that something hasn't been revealed to me. I don't know where to go! You have to help me, I need your advice! So many thoughts are roaming around in my brain. So many questions - unanswered. I was devastated to leave you with the menacing bear as you were already severely injured. I feel hopeless, like a traitor. I hope you don't hate me for it. Survival so far has been really difficult. Frankly, you were an amazing father and taught me lots but not all I need to know. As I sit down and think about you, the wind cries with me but I try to stay brave. Sadly, I haven't been able to eat that much during my journey.

All my life you have kept me safe.
Injured, you gave me the chance to run as you sacrificed your life. I have struggled throughout my adventure and have many questions: Who is my guide?; How can I, a pathetic child, find the mountain if nobody else has? I need your advice, I need you.

I will fulfill your requirements and make you proud. As you have sacrificed your life for mine, I will avenge you and slay the aggressive, monstrous beast who took you away from me. I hope you are proud of me.

Your loving son,

Torak.