

My mighty Thane of Caithness, you are the bravest man in Scotland, even this honorable title hath no respect. Oh Lord, you are the strongest person who we can trust; you deserve being king. You need to do it for us! I can see the doubts on your face, I can tell how you feel.

Don't be a coward! You have fought for victory, my husband. You deserve it, you deserve that crown. You should also feel that people think you loyal. The king's children are defenceless; you saved Scotland for us! We know your valiant; we know your strength; we know your power, we can't think of any king more powerful than you.

Even though the weird sisters foretold it already, think about how powerful you'll be after you commit thy deed. King Duncan isn't enough; you will be the greatest leader: being king means wealth and power for you! The king has not done anything to save this land. However, you can show that real kings are not scared of anything. Stay with thee instinct and path!

As you can be trusted, take this chance to murder King Duncan after his supper. My king, you will serve Scotland the best, better than any king. Do you think any warrior is equivalent to your power? A wise warrior must be worshipped by you! You are allowed to take that throne for yourself and no one should deny.

There is no other option now. My husband, you are across the line of doing it. Save our land and KILL Duncan tonight. Show how brave you are, shock your servants and they will see how your character is.
