

My mighty Thane of Caedon! I know you're worried but there are two choices and one obvious one which is right in front of you. Your fate has already been decided you just have to push yourself.

Don't you want to be more powerful and kill that useless overpowered king? If you don't you're just going to be a worthless warrior that knowone really cares about and your offering your life again and again to protect the whole of Scotland. I know he is your cousin but all he has done was give you wealth and that's probably $\frac{1}{12}$ of what he actually has. Aren't you brave enough? How can you kill a ~~hundred~~ of people in the battle field but not this old man who is yet to die soon.

If you do it, we will make fortunes of money and soon we can pass it on to our children. They will become future king and queens aswell as grabbing an even more vast fortune which intern will give more power in our family.

Are you not man enough to kill this wretching? You will be a better, noble king aswell, all he does is just sit there but you can protect us and fight. My purpose in life is to serve you so take what is rightfully yours.

Its either me or the king.
