

Macbeth as your partner and your wife, I recommend you to become the King. You are Thane of Cawdor you only need to take a few more steps to become King. This opportunity isn't going to come again so your going to have to do it. To be more clear Kill

King Duncan. This is not just for Scotland. It's for you. It's for us. It's for our future. And if you refuse this offer you will no longer be Thane of Cawdor you will be "Thane of Cowardness". Imagine, your reputation dragged through the dung heap. For what? Because you can't kill an old man! You are nothing to me Macbeth. You are pathetic and weak! What's killing one person going to do?

Even though, your worried, try look on the bright-side. You will be King and you will be fighting for your home-land, Scotland, your Country will be chanting your name, your ancestors will be proud don't you think? The future holds more for you Macbeth. You go about killing hundreds of men in battle and what do you get from the King? In return you get an old Castle! You already have that! The King takes your skill for granted. However, if you kill him, you can end Scotland's war and that would be a very honourable and noble thing (rather than standing there and Duncan get's all the credit).

If you do have the guts to do it it's not even your fault the Witches decided your fate so why ignore it? Change needs to happen. You can't just sit around waiting for fate fate sits around waiting for you.

And don't even get me started on those so called "King's heirs". They aren't responsible enough. Imagine! Scotland will be in ruins all because those no good-doers will be destroying the land.

You have much more experience so take this into consideration.
