

The Stone Age

There were three main periods in stone age, paleolithic, mesolithic and neolithic.

Introduction

The stone age covers almost all of human history.

Through most of the stone age, people were hunter-gatherers. Gradually, early people developed to live in groups and communicate.

Food

Stone Age people hunted for meat using weapons they had made. They also gathered goods such as berries and fruits so that they ate a balanced diet. As the climate changed they developed

Tools

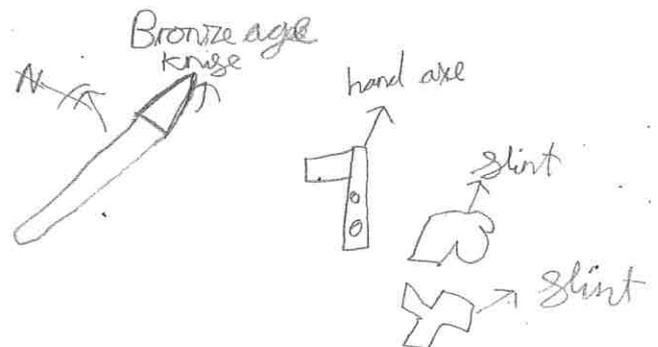

In the stone age, people started to make tools out of scrapers so that they could skin animals. They also made axes because they needed to chop wood for fires.

Shelter

Stone age people made homes by using flexible wood (trees) and if they got hunting and lightning struck their house then they will make their house somewhere else.

Clothes

Stone age people made clothes out of thin tools like scrapers is if they have leftover polymer clothes then they will cut the clothes into shirts, long leggings and long sleeve jumper.
