Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to inform you about an urgent matter which has come to my concern. Poor little varmints are under attack from the Others, their whole home is getting damaged. They have nowhere else to go! Are you able to think about them for one minute?

If their whole home was conquered by the Others, who do you think will look after the land? Not them, the varmints are the ones who actually care and worry about it. There is nowhere that they can stay, I would say that they have been victimized so probably anywhere that they go they will get found. We need to stop it while we can or they will become EXTINCT!

This continuous raid has done some terrible damage - each morning there isn't any peaceful noise of the singing birds, you can't smell the fresh morning air you can only smell darkness and pollution. Terminal unit sky blankets the town while the others start to heave and pull up the buildings. The varmints must be petrified and hungry, they must be really worried.

Surely you should want to help these poor little creatures? They will lose their home a home they grew up in a home they love. Wouldn't you feel heartbroken if you were in his shoes? They are starving, scared and cold. They will become extinct in no time. Would you want a cute and caring animal to become extinct under your watch? How would you feel living with that in your thoughts? For the reasons that I have shown you, you should fight and save them.

Kind regards
Isabella
